

09/520378

ABSTRACT

An extensible Global Positioning System (GPS) receiver system is described. The receiver system isolates user application processing from time critical GPS acquisition and tracking processing in order to insure that GPS acquisition and tracking processing is timely performed. Thus user application processing can be developed without concern of conflict with GPS acquisition and tracking processing.